++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet and windy, but winds beginning to ease.

Today:
A murky day for all, as a band of rain, heavy at times, moves southeastwards across the region through the day. Winds will be easing throughout but remaining brisk, especially in the north. Feeling mild. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Rain will remain persistent through the evening, but ease and clear southeastwards overnight. Clear spells will follow, with patchy fog possible in prone locations. Winds easing further. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Thursday:
After a cloudy start, it will be a dry day with sunny spells. Remaining mild but feeling colder than recently. Frost possible overnight. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cold and cloudy to start Friday, then dry with plenty of sunshine. Rather cloudy but largely dry this weekend, with sunny spells. Mild days but overnight frost possible.
